AFTER COMBAT: SOLDIERS RETURN HOME FROM THE MILLENNIAL WARS
There is much coverage in popular media concerning the numerous soldiers returning to the United States from lengthy wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and the particular challenges these veterans face in returning to civilian life. We are writing a book about combat experience and seek to tell the stories of war and return home from the perspective of soldiers themselves. For the past two years we have been conducting interviews with over a dozen combat veterans who have agreed to allow their stories to be included in a book of oral narratives concerning the war. If you are willing to participate in an interview via telephone, video-call (such as face-time or skype), or in person—the interviews generally last less than 90 minutes—please contact us at meide@tamu.edu.

Marian Eide
Associate Professor—English
Texas A&M University

Colonel Michael Gibler
Retired—Army